New Execution Fears in Uruguay

In Montevideo — Condolences at U. S. Embassy

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The murder of a kidnapped U.S. official and a new execution threat increased fears today for the lives of Brazilian consul and an American agricultural expert still held by the Tupamaro guerrillas.

A local radio station reported early today that a body had been found near a beachside avenue and possibly was that of the Brazilian diplomat. Police and soldiers searched the area but reported they found no body.

The UPI reported that police and thousands of army troops sealed off the capital from the rest of Uruguay today and searched door-to-door for a captive American and a Brazilian diplomat threatened with execution by Tupamaros guerrillas.

Authorities raided a suspected Tupamaros camp on the outskirts of the city, making four arrests and confiscating revolvers, hand grenades, machine guns and explosives.

But they found no trace of the two men despite telephone calls to newspapers early in the day claiming the Brazilian had been killed as was another American hostage on Monday.

The leftist Tupamaros abducted U.S. police advisor Dan A. Mitrione and Brazilian Consul Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide on July 31 and demanded the release of all political prisoners in Uruguay as ransom. The government refused to deal with the kidnappers, and Mitrione was found shot to death early Monday in an abandoned stolen car.

Last Friday the guerrillas seized another hostage, Claude L. Fly, 65, of Fort Collins, Colo., an American agricultural expert working for the Uruguayan government.

A Uruguayan television station received a note Monday saying the kidnappers would execute Daisias Gomide at midnight if the estimated 150 political prisoners were not freed. Government security agencies refused to confirm the authenticity of the note, and the deadline passed with no word from the kidnappers.

The note did not mention Fly. Congress met in special session Monday and approved President Jorge Pacheco Areco's request for suspension of all individual civil rights for 20 days. This gives the police more freedom in their massive search for the kidnappers and their hostages, which already has resulted in the capture of 100 suspects and several top Tupamaro leaders.

The government also broadened press censorship, forbidding newspapers to publish photos related to the Mitrione killing. They are barred from referring to the Tupamaros by name under earlier censorship regulations.

After Mitrione's body was found, Dias Gomide's wife made an emotional radio appeal to the government and people of Uruguay. Sobbing, she said the guerrillas had told her in a message to urge the public to gather in front of Government House and demand that the president free the political prisoners.

Political demonstrations are illegal in Uruguay, and there was no public response to her appeal. Pacheco Areco released a statement denouncing the slaying of Mitrione but reiterating his refusal to deal with the guerrillas, whom he calls common criminals.

In Washington, State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said the U.S. government had urged the Uruguayan government to do everything possible to secure the safe return of Mitrione. But he said Washington did not press demands because that would encourage other terrorists to kidnap more Americans.

Women Power—Martha's Hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Martha Griffiths is counting on women power to propel through the Senate and the state legislatures a constitutional amendment guaranteeing women equal rights with men.

"A lot of things have changed," the Michigan Democrat grinned as she savored a 350-15 victory in the House Monday. She had pried the measure from the Judiciary Committee shelf where it had collected dust for 47 years and engineered the floor victory.

But that was only the beginning, she said, pointing to the Senate where possibly fatal delays await the proposal. And after that, the amendment must be approved by 38 of the 50 legislatures before becoming a part of the Constitution.

Other backers are not so optimistic about chances of the amendment. Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., who says she has felt more prejudice as a woman than as a Negro, is fearful that men who run the game of politics still may block the proposal.

She cited, for example, Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., 82 and a widower, who sought to have the amendment sent back to committee for more study.

"Let's face it, Mr. Celler has been one of the champions for the civil rights of minorities—but he is like other men in feeling individual civil rights for 20 days. This gives the police more nite limitations on them." Mrs. Chisholm said.

And the galleries, packed with women, weren't buying Celler's argument that "there is as much difference between a male and a female as there is between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse. Vive la difference."

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., has approved a companion measure. Backers concede, however, there is enough opposition in the full committee at least to delay the amendment. Bayh is committed to pressing first for action on an amendment for direct election of the president, now ready for Senate action.

Until Monday, the House had never had a chance to vote on the women's amendment, which states that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

The Senate twice has approved similar amendments—but with a rider preserving legislation purportedly protecting women.

The outnumbered opposition to the current amendment, led by Celler, contended no one could tell what effect it would have on a wide variety of laws, such as those relating to paternity, rape, military service, family matters and protection for working women. He promised early hearings if the measure were sent back to his committee, but the House brushed the suggestion aside.

"I don't want to be one of the boys," said Rep. Margaret M. Heckler, R-Mass., but laws discriminate against women on the jobs and in the home.

This time the women's championed or abridged by the United (Continued on Page 4 Col. 6)

2,000 Communists Ring South Vietnamese Base

SAIGON (UPI)—An Allied commander said today some 2,000 North Vietnamese have surrounded a South Vietnamese artillery base near the Laotian border. South Vietnamese troops sent in reinforcements and U.S. planes flew air strikes in an effort to break up the siege.

Col. Nguyen Van Diem, a regimental commander of the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division, said the 2,000 troops were part of five North Vietnamese battalions around Fire Support Base O'Reilly, 26 miles west of Hue and 12 miles east of Laos.

Diem estimated 250 North Vietnamese had been killed in fighting around the base since Saturday. Air strikes flown by Allied planes, including U.S. B52s, were credited with killing most of the Communist troops.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese casualties were one killed and 24 wounded.

Diem said the apparent intention of the North Vietnamese was to take allied artillery bases in the region one by one, with the goal of opening an infiltration route from Laos toward South Vietnam's northern coastal plains.

The base is four miles north of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division's abandoned Artillery Base Ripcord. Ripcord was evacuated July 23 under heavy Communist pressure after a 23-day siege that killed 61 Americans and wounded 345.

The U.S. command announced today that two U.S. Marine Air Wing units totaling 615 men, Headquarters and 100 mortars in the attack against O'Reilly.

Field reports said three troops of the 25th Infantry Division were killed and six wounded in a four-hour battle with Communist troops Monday 40 miles northwest of Saigon. It was the biggest action of the day in Vietnam.

Two other Americans were killed and two wounded when their truck hit a mine in Binh Duong province northwest of Saigon Monday.

The U.S. command announced today that two U.S. Marine Air Wing units totaling 615 men, Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron No. 17 and Wing Equipment Repair Squadron No. 17, will leave for Iwakuni, Japan, Aug. 18, as part of the Nixon administration's 50,000-man withdrawal to be completed by Oct. 16.

Reports from Phnom Penh today said the Cambodian command had reinforced and reorganized security in anticipation of Communist terrorism in the capital.

A Cambodian spokesman said a North Vietnamese soldier captured four miles from the heart of Phnom Penh said his unit had been assigned to terrorize selected targets in the capital.

Save Two Shawangunk Homes

By WALTER S. CLARK

WALKER VALLEY

Combined efforts of firefighters from this community and Pine Bush saved two homes and two frame sheds in the path of flames that billowed from a large frame dairy barn that was leveled on the Patrick J. Kelly farm off Red Mills Road in the Town of Shawangunk Monday night.

Another fire in the Town of Lloyd swept a large frame barn and destroyed the contents, reported to have been apple crates.

In Dutchess county two men were injured and hospitalized for burns after two unexplained explosions occurred as metered gas was being delivered to a residence in the hamlet of Holmes.

Shortly before 9:30 p.m. yesterday, Walker Valley firemen in charge of Chief J. Gregston Greer were dispatched to the Kelly farm with seven pieces of apparatus. Pine Bush fire units already were at the scene according to Chief Greer.

Greer said when firemen arrived at the farm the "fire was in the sky." The large dairy barn which housed a large supply of hay and farm machinery was totally involved in flames.

About 80 firefighters from the local companies with a large turnout of Pine Bush volunteers battled the flames using water that was relayed a distance of 3,800 feet from a farm pond by two fire trucks.

Firemen concentrated their attention to two frame sheds near the burning barn, and they also doused two residences across the highway that were smoldering under the blistering heat from the main blaze.

A bulldozer was brought in to push the hay around so that firemen could direct streams of water on the smoldering material.

Greer said the origin of the fire was not known and there was no estimate of the loss. Fire units reported back in service at about 4 a.m.

During the height of the barn fire, units from Walden were on standby alert at the Pine Bush firehouse and Cragmoor firemen covered up at the Walker Valley station, Greer noted.

Shortly after 11 p.m. Highland fire units numbering 52 men in charge of Chief Joseph Valentino responded to an alarm after fire was reported in a large frame barn on the property of the Green Grove Farm off Route 44-55 in the Town of Lloyd.

Valentino said that when firemen reached the scene they found the structure engulfed in flames. It was reported by officials that a large supply of apple crates was lost in the blaze, the origin of which was not known.

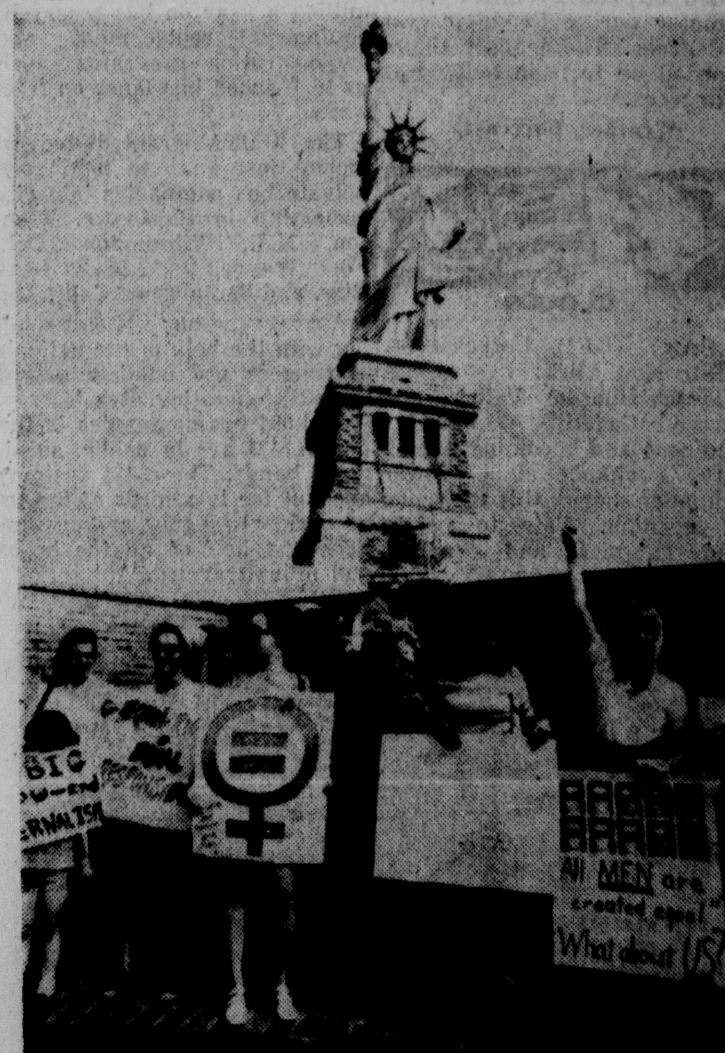

The explosions in the Dutchess County community are under investigation by State Police BCI agents from the Dover Plains station.

Troopers reported that 38-year-old James Carollo of Brewster, an employee of a Katonah firm, was making a delivery of metered gas at a residence in Holmes. After hooking up the line, Carollo was startled by an explosion and he tried to shut off the flow of gas at the emergency switch.

Authorities said Carollo and Donald Seeley, 35, of Beacon, reportedly were attempting to extinguish fire that developed after the blast when a second explosion rocked the area. The two men were taken to the Putnam Community Hospital in Carmel and treated for first and second degree burns of the face and arms.

Firemen from Pawling went to the scene and extinguished the fire that followed the explosions.

Defense Team Rift Develops In Sharon Tate Murder Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rift appears to be developing in the defense team in the Sharon Tate murder trial. Three lawyers have accused Charles M. Manson's attorney of trying to "dump" three women codefendants to help Manson's case.

Manson, the shaggy-haired clan leader accused of ordering the women to kill Miss Tate and six others, joined the attack Monday on his own attorney, Irving Kanarek.

"I object to my attorney," Manson told the judge. "He's not speaking for me."

The complaints about Kanarek came during his sixth day of cross-examination of the state's star witness, Linda Kasabian, who Monday was granted immunity from prosecution. He hammered away at details of the night a year ago when the beautiful actress and four others were slain at her Bel Air mansion.

Other attorneys said the testimony was repetitious. They objected particularly to accounts of the roles of two women defendants in the killings.

Paul Fitzgerald objected successfully six times to Kanarek's questions concerning his client, Patricia Krenwinkel, 22, and vehemently opposed introduction into evidence of a picture of the bloody body of one victim.

"The picture is prejudicial and inflammatory," Fitzgerald said. The judge ruled the picture would not be admitted until Kanarek laid a proper foundation with questioning. Kanarek dropped the subject.

Daye Shinn, representing Susan Atkins, 21, objected to a question eliciting testimony about a conversation Mrs. Kasabian said she had with Miss Atkins.

Later, Ronald Hughes, attorney for Leslie Van Houten, 20, told newsmen he felt Kanarek was hurting the defense case with his cross-examination. "He's turned her from an incredible witness into a credible witness," said Hughes. "He's hurting us by getting into the crime. I keep asking him to stop. . . . He sort of ignores me."

Legislature to Get Resolution On Real Property Tax Agency

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON
A move to create the Ulster County Real Property Tax Service Agency and appoint John G. "Jack" Reynolds of 171 Horton Lane, Port Ewen to the salaried post as director of the agency, will be made Thursday night when a resolution to that effect is offered the Ulster County Legislature by Ralph Brach (R-Dist. 9) on behalf of the Tax Base Study Committee. A new state law mandates that each county of the state establish such an agency and appoint a director for a term of six years before Oct. 1, 1971. Similar resolutions were offered the Legislature in 1967 and 1968 by Majority Leader Douglas V. Dye (R-Dist. 2) and referred to the Tax Base Committee for study. Dye said the present proposed action is welcome in that it places emphasis on the total tax picture rather than concentrating on the town level only.

The new law also mandates that each county prepare a tax map of the county and that it be maintained by the agency.

Brach states that to delay the establishment of the agency until 1971 will delay the preparation of the tax map for another year and will not leave adequate time for the director of the agency to prepare to be of service to the assessors to be appointed at that time.

Reynolds, who has served as chairman of the Board of Assessors in the Town of Esopus for more than 10 years, was elected district governor of Lions International last year and has been chairman of the the Lions Sight Conservation project in the Hudson Valley.

A 1942 graduate of Kingston High School, he completed the N.Y. State University business administration course and the Artillery Motor Transportation course at Fort Sill, Okla.

He has more than 25 years of military service. Reynolds is a veteran of World War II having served with the U.S. Marine Corps. He joined the National Guard in 1947.

He is also a member of the American Legion, Port Ewen Fire Department and is active in the Republican Club in Ulster County.

Brach, in his resolution, states that his committee has determined that a considerable amount may be saved in the preparation of the tax map by contracting the preparation of the base map and by having the plotting of the parcels on the base map done by qualified county employees.

He state further that two persons, one a licensed surveyor with over 20 years experience and the other with 10 years experience in preparing tax maps have been accepted and approved by the State Board of Equalization and Assessment and have indicated their willingness to accept appointments effective, Jan. 1, 1971.

Nerve Gas Rockets Near Destination

By United Press International

Two military trains carrying deadly nerve gas rockets cleared their last large city today and started their run toward the sea, where the gas will be dumped in the ocean depths.

A 24-car train from the Richmond, Ky., arsenal rolled down through the Appalachia coal country during the night and made its way through Spartanburg, S.C.—the largest city along its route—about 9 a.m.

At the same hour a 46-car train from the Anniston, Ala., Army depot left Athens, Ga., after a two-hour stop to take on added fuel and water.

The two trains pick up the same track at Clinton, S.C., and head almost eastward in their run for the Sunny Point Military Terminal near Wilmington, N.C., where the gas will be loaded aboard an old ship hull for disposal in the Atlantic.

The Anniston train looped far to the south to avoid passing through Atlanta, and the Richmond train also detoured around the big population centers of Greensboro, Winston-Salem, and Charlotte, N. C. Charlotte is the largest city in the Carolinas.

Crowds turned out all along the routes of the two trains, apparently satisfied by the Army's assurances that the chances of an accident are "nil."

The 46-car Anniston train ground to a halt just outside Macon, Ga., shortly after midnight because of what one railroad official said apparently was a "burst air line on the brakes." The trouble was repaired in about 30 minutes and the train proceeded toward Athens, Ga.

Carival Atmosphere
The 24-car Richmond train was greeted by waving crowds as it crawled through the coal country of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee under overcast skies Monday. Soldiers riding a pilot train in front of the diesel engine waved to spectators with the V-finger "peace" sign.

Several hundred persons were on hand when the train passed through Macon, where Mayor Ronnie Thompson last week had threatened to barricade the tracks to stop the train. Thompson later withdrew his objections after inspecting Army safety procedures at Anniston.

The train went to Macon, a city of 100,000 plus, to bypass metropolitan Atlanta, an area of 1.3 million.

A surging crowd delayed the train for several minutes at Norton, Va.

Small Town Excitement
"People just wanted to see what it looked like," explained Patrolman James Sturgill. "Some people down there never had seen a train before although I guess a million of them pass through here every day."

About 500 persons were waiting when the train later pulled into Bremen, Ga. "This is the most excitement we've had in this town in a long time," said city employee John Stembridge, recalling the last big event was in 1943 when a butane gas tank exploded. "This many people wouldn't come out if the President came to town," he added.

The trains, not exceeding 35 miles per hour, are expected to arrive on the North Carolina coast at midweek. The rockets, which the Army said had begun to leak in storage, are to be loaded aboard an old freighter and towed 282 miles out to sea and dumped into 16,000-foot deep water. Salt water will neutralize the nerve gas, which can killed a person within minutes.

hicle and traffic law violations and took him before Woodstock Town Justice Rudolf Baumgarten.

Troopers said Gardner was fined $50 for driving 100 miles an hour in a 65-mile zone and Judge Baumgarten sentenced him to three days in the Ulster County jail on the speeding count.

According to authorities, Gardner allegedly drove his change and Gardner was taken into custody.

Stag Movie Experiment Termed 'Revoltant'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee is fuming at White House researchers who monitored the responses of 23 young men as they watched a stag movie. Chairman Robert N.C. Nix, D-Pa., demands an explanation.

Nix termed the experiment revolting, and said he would have subpoenaed Mrs. James L. Howard, Clifford S. Reifler and Myron B. Liptzin of the President's Commission on Pornography if they hadn't volunteered to testify.

The trio, from the University of North Carolina, have said the experiment demonstrated prolonged exposure to pornography becomes boring.

Nix said Monday the experiment encouraged students to violate moral standards at a time when they are questioning all values established by their elders.

"I want to know what the justification of this experiment is that it warrants breakdown of the culture," Nix said in an interview. "I don't think any culture has survived without fixed moral values."

"There have been experiments that seemed questionable but proved to benefit all mankind," he added. "If this proves to be that, I'll accept it. But I'll be damned if I'll take it like it is."

The commission's preliminary finding that pornography does not cause sex crimes and is not harmful was challenged in opening testimony before Nix's post-al operations subcommittee by a Salt Lake City psychologist.

"Because of the extreme complexity of the problem and the uniqueness of individual human experience," Dr. Victor B. Cline, said in prepared testimony, "it is doubtful that we will ever have absolutely convincing scientific proof that pornography is or isn't harmful."

Cline, chairman of the Salt Lake Area Youth Protection Committee, said reports that sex crimes dropped 31 per cent in Denmark after pornography was legalized are misleading because public indecency, voyeurism, male prostitution and sale of pornography are no longer counted as crimes in Denmark.

Cline said long-term effects of pornography cannot be determined from short-term studies such as those conducted by the presidential commission or by Denmark's one-year experience with legalized pornography.

"We may have to wait possibly for a generation," he said in his prepared remarks, to note its full effect on the life styles, marriage, patterns of divorce and the general happiness and well being of the Danish people.

Goodell Names Campaign Head For Upstate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Republican Sen. Charles E. Goodell announced Monday that Monroe County Manager Gordon A. Howe has been appointed upstate chairman for Goodell's election campaign.

Howe, who has served in public life for more than 40 years, will make his headquarters in Rochester.

Goodell, whose name will appear on both the GOP and Liberal party ballots, said he was "delighted" that Howe, former Republican Monroe County chairman, has agreed to accept the new post.

"I look forward with pleasure to having the benefit of his (Howe's) long experience in public life on the Republican political scene, both in Monroe County and in the state. His counsel will be invaluable in my campaign," Goodell said.

No Fault Insurance Plan May Become Massachusetts Law

By RICHARD GAINES

BOSTON (UPI)—A first-in-the-nation no fault insurance plan, which would include a required 15 per cent across the board reduction in rates for 1971, was expected to go to Gov. Francis W. Sargent some time today.

The bill received final approval from the House Monday and was sent to the Senate where little or no opposition was expected.

If the bill is signed into law, three of the state's five leading insurance companies have announced plans to stop writing auto insurance policies in Massachusetts.

The companies vigorously oppose the provision for rate reduction in all categories of insurance and an automatic renewal provision in the 12-page bill.

The bill is similar to one proposed by New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller but killed this year in legislative committee in Albany.

The debate on auto insurance reform began in the Senate three weeks ago Monday. At each stage in its legislative history, progress was painfully slow.

Twice Senate debate carried beyond midnight on the plan to reduce auto insurance costs for year discount on the following the state's 2.5 million drivers, year's policy as well as other who now pay what are considered among the highest rates in the nation.

The bill, aside from its 15 percent across-the-board slash in rates, contained the following provisions:

— The concept of no-fault insurance, under which companies pay their policyholders for loss of wages and medical expenses up to $2,000 regardless of who is at fault for any accident.

— Loss above $2,000 would be recoverable by court action.

— The concept of merit rating, under which safe drivers would receive a 2 percent a law.

Threat to Public Lands

Most Americans wholeheartedly support the effort to preserve as much as possible of this country's open spaces and wilderness areas, for themselves and for future generations.

Others of us seem constitutionally unable to stand the sight of unspoiled nature.

These are not the strip miners, the pesticide dumpers, the marsh drainers and dam builders, those who are the usual targets of conservationists. They are ordinary people who go to public parks and similar places set aside for the enjoyment of all and do their best to turn them into outdoor slums.

"Outdoor slums" was how Daniel A. Poole, president of the Wildlife Management Institute, described the situation to the Senate Public Lands Subcommittee the other day. He was testifying in support of a bill introduced by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., which would beef up the powers of the Bureau of Public Land Management, the federal agency charged with maintaining more than 450 billion acres of public lands.

Daily violations on public lands cited by Poole include dumping of garbage, driving motorcycles in unauthorized areas, stealing equipment from campgrounds, burning vegetation, littering, digging up plants and fossil specimens, stealing Christmas trees, the dangerous use of firearms and various acts of vandalism.

A big aid to the vandal in recent years has been that handy gadget, the aerosol bomb. With a few cans of spray paint, a determined desecrator can leave his more or less permanent mark over a much wider area than he was formerly able to.

So little authority do bureau employees have, claims Poole, that if one catches a vandal in the act of breaking up a picnic table for instance, all he can do is ask him to stop. He cannot make an arrest. In those infrequent instances when convictions are obtained, fines are light.

Besides more law enforcement authority, the bureau also needs more money and manpower to maintain decent recreation areas, with good water, sanitation and other public health safeguards.

By all means, the big-industrial despoilers must be checked. But just as it is individual Americans in their millions who are the major sources of pollution in our crowded areas, so it is careless and selfish individuals in their few or many thousands who are the real threat to our open spaces.

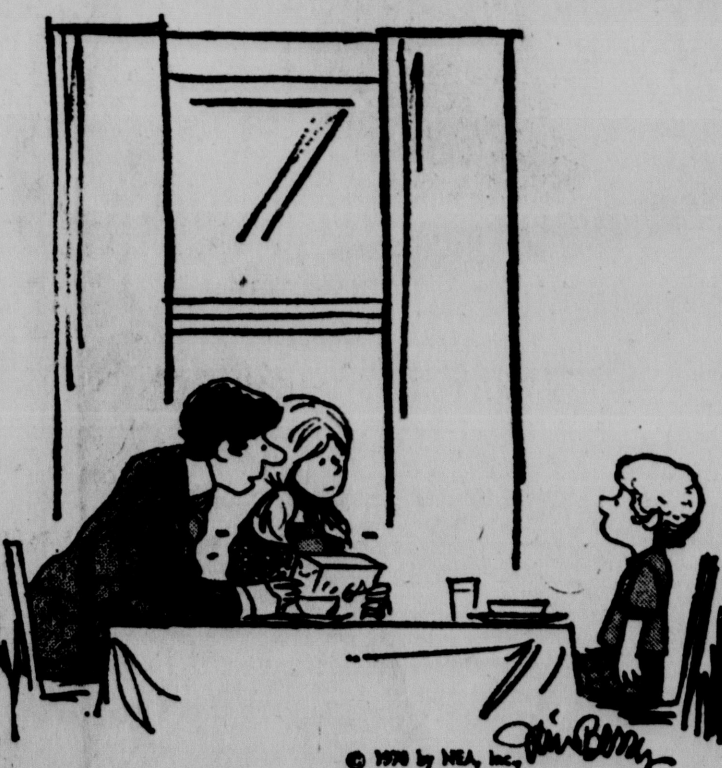

They should be stepped on.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott was blaming Congress for a budget deficit of $6 billion or $7 billion by next June. Senator William Proxmire, Wisconsin Democrat, replied, "The American public is convinced that Congress is spending money like a drunken sailor and that only the President can hold back the dam." He didn't mean to, but he hit the nail on the head.

An opinion poll of Pennsylvania's Young Republicans showed an overwhelming 87 per cent strongly disapprove of campus demonstrations. They favor cutting federal aid to students who participate in such demonstrations. Once more, the vast majority reject campus violence and vote for non-interference with higher education.

Persons who cannot find work in private industry would be trained for public service jobs under a bill unanimously approved by the Senate Labor Committee. The $9 billion three-year manpower training bill does not say who is going to provide the public service jobs.

BERRY'S WORLD

"All in Favor Raise Your Hand!"

Henry J. Taylor Says Hoover Unjustly Maligned

On a summer day in years gone by Herbert Hoover, the 31st President of the United States, met with neighbors and fishermen friends at Madison, Va., and thanked them for that afternoon's hospitality.

Speaking of his fishing camp at the headwaters of the Rappahannock River, Mr. Hoover concluded: "Next to prayer, fishing is the most constant reminder of the democracy of life, of humility and of human frailty for all men are equal before fishes. And it is desirable that the President of United States should be periodically reminded of this fundamental fact... that the forces of nature discriminate for no man."

A Culpeper, Va., admirer placed this in memorial bronze on the Madison County Courthouse in 1960. August 10, in turn, is the anniversary of Mr. Hoover's birthday in 1874 — probably the most unjustly maligned public figure of our century.

A whole generation may not now recall how vicious and protracted this contrived castigation was. Our country grew to be the victim of a world depression, although America's resistance to it was high and the United States was the last major nation in the world to succumb. President Hoover's political opponents rewrote this to read the "Hoover Depression" and then campaigned on this outrageous and damaging falsity for a full 20 years.

Repetition was Cato's trick of "Carthage must fall! Carthage must fall!" and the "Hoover Depression".

distortion remains embedded in the minds of millions to this very day.

Yet, surely no more gentle, selfless and truly humanitarian man ever occupied the White House. Actually, Mr. Hoover began his public life before we entered World War I by being constantly sent like a fire engine, or dispatched like a lifeboat, to all the tragic scenes of hunger abroad.

Mr. Hoover's Relief Commission in prostrate Russia once fed 10 million Russians a day! He came to the world's stricken countries as though America's national eagle soared across any misery-laden skies trailing a streamer that read: Hope. And everywhere on this earth this selfless American was as welcome as if he were the sun that would begin the melting of the snows.

In how many merciful journeys throughout his life how many crushed men, women and children passed in front of him where there was nothing for them to eat but their hearts?

Yet this man, once he became President, literally by acclamation, was relentlessly pictured by political opponents, for their own gain, as totally blind to human suffering.

The orphan child of a West Branch, Iowa, blacksmith and a Quaker mother, Mr. Hoover once told me something I have never seen published. He said that his parents had named him Binajah. Biblical devotion was a keynote in the upbringing of this child.

Mr. Hoover always thanked America itself for his own advancement. "The land of the second chance," as he called it. But, beyond humanitarianism — and approached only by Sir Winston Churchill — no man of our century also led such a diversified life.

Mr. Hoover was literally a part of everything—the worlds of scholarship, education, exploration, industry, diplomacy, engineering and the cultivation of the arts, especially the high art of ancient Athens, Rome and China. This author of 32 books and holder of more university honorary degrees—89—than any man in the world was working on his 33rd book when he died. Yet he always remained "a very humble person," as Dickens would say.

Nor did the long cruelties of partisan politics embitter him, even when these were in crescendo. His personal magnanimity in the face of these cruelties was all but incredible. And in spite of the human agonies that he saw everywhere he never surrendered the hopes and merciful efforts on behalf of mankind that guided his entire life.

Mr. Hoover walked humbly with his God. And because spirit is the Lord of matter he was faced only with the detail of an outward body when, at age 90, he died. Is it any wonder that the years that had passed over his head left only their springtimes behind?

The anniversary of this American's birthday should not go unnoticed by the country and the world that he so selflessly, so prayerfully served.

Promise Overhaul of Pentagon Would Improve Management

By RAY CROMLEY

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — There is much talk these days about reorganization in the Pentagon. A blue-ribbon group has issued a report suggesting radical changes. Defense Secretary Melvin Laird is known to favor a major overhaul.

The reforms, it's promised, would reduce costs, improve management and insure a more effective defense.

Anyone who has ever watched the Pentagon from within or without knows there is something wrong with the way it operates.

But this reporter has lived through a series of major reorganizations, all of which promised efficiency, savings, better management.

There was, for example, the unification plan which created the Department of Defense. More lately, there was the Robert S. McNamara revolution. But the Pentagon didn't change. Management efficiency continued low. Cost overruns grew.

The reporter, having covered the Pentagon for more than 20 years, believes these reforms have made things worse, not better. They have tended toward over-centralization.

The situation is like that in some conglomerates which have flourished during the past decade, only to fumble in the last year or two. The conglomerate would find a smaller company that looked promising, but perhaps needed more cash or other assets. The smaller company would be bought with stock. Then the conglomerate's management would move in and ease out the little firm's men, replace them with specialists under the close direction of the big company's officers. Soon the conglomerate found itself managing so many small companies that, like the Pentagon, it became bogged down in committees and meetings and faced with a host of major decisions on matters with which the top men weren't in day-to-day contact.

Things had gone fine so long as the economy was bubbling. But the slowdown brought crises. Bad decisions began to stand out. The rule-by-too-many-committees slowed down inventiveness, made it more difficult to get new ideas adopted. Yet growth was dependent on adapting quickly to new approaches.

The Pentagon, of course, is a conglomerate. Like the unhappy enterprises mentioned above, over the years its top men have believed that things would work right if only they could centralize decisions, prevent competition (inter-service rivalry), root out overlap and gain uniformity. On paper, this saves money. But, as the conglomerates have found, this centralized decision making, and the resultant discouragement of independent creative action by subordinates, drives out able managers.

Today, the Pentagon is having greater and greater difficulty attracting first-rank men to serve as secretary of the Army, Navy or Air Force. At one time these men were full cabinet officers; they had a wide range of decision authority. Yet so far have they fallen in recent years that McNamara bypassed them when he chose on matters for which they were responsible. Under the new reorganization plan these posts would sink even lower in prestige and authority.

The Chinese Communists in their "great leap forward" found that their huge, "efficient" communes, run by experts, were not nearly so productive as "inefficient" family farms. The Russians are finding that if they are to increase efficiency, they must allow factory managers greater independence.

The best run and most successful of the major American companies have learned that first-rate men must be picked for running their subordinate firms, then given their own reins within top management's guidelines. The companies that have done this are those which have done well in adversity.

The problem the Pentagon faces is finding the best men to take the top jobs and then convincing the defense secretary to give them as free a hand as national security and the budget allow. This is the only reform that will cut costs and produce better strategy and weapons.

Jack Anderson Says General Huang Is Emerging As Successor to Mao Tse-tung

WASHINGTON—A little-known Chinese general, Huang Yuang-sheng, is emerging as the most powerful man in Communist China and the eventual successor of Mao Tse-tung.

Huang's name has seldom been mentioned outside of intelligence reports. But he runs the People's Liberation Army which, in turn, seems to be running China. Military men have taken over key posts throughout the central, provincial and local governments. Half of the all-powerful Politburo, for example, came out of the army.

In 1969, in line with the army's power, Defense Minister Lin Biao was written into the Constitution by Mao as his legal successor. With Lin ailing, however, the rise of Huang, 62, to the top could come swiftly.

Of course, outsiders can never be sure what's going on behind the inscrutable Chinese dragon mask. But the U.S. has developed a thorough dredging operation which has produced reasonably reliable intelligence.

Tall towers in Okinawa monitor just about every broadcast and telecast out of mainland China. In the backrooms of the American consulate in Hong Kong, 30 to 40 specialists read the newspapers and periodicals. Every promising refugee who slips across the border into Hong Kong is interviewed in depth.

For a while, a man from the consulate even watched the pig shipments that came across the border from Red China into Hong Kong. He could tell from his pig count which mainland cities were too strife-torn to export pork.

Detailed aerial photos, air samplings and electronic soundings bring in other secret intelligence. From all this, experts piece together the Chinese puzzle. Sometimes the pieces don't fit, but usually the U.S. gets the picture.

Here are the latest highlights:

Army Takes Over

The army has gradually suppressed the cultural revolution and put trusted officers in control of the government machinery. They administer most of the provinces through "revolutionary committees." They have also stepped into most of the vacancies left by purged civilian officials. The military command has seemed more interested in ending the chaos than in acquiring political power. But the result has been to make Huang Yuang-sheng, the army chief, enormously powerful.

The menacing Soviet build-up on the border has compelled the powers in Peking to turn to the army—a development that has additionally strengthened Huang's hand. He has demanded political stability if China is to meet the threat. Out of the settling-down process has come a new stability which the army both enforces and administers.

The Soviet threat has also forced Huang to shift massive forces from the south to the north. This has reduced the Chinese military pressure upon Southeast Asia. For years, the Red Chinese have been building a network of military roads that point like daggers at Vietnam, Laos, Thailand, Burma and the Himalayan states of Bhutan, Nepal and Assam. While the activity on these roads hasn't halted, it has abated.

Meanwhile, the containment of China, the great U.S. objective in the 1960s, is becoming more of a Soviet problem.

Answer to Heineman

Ben Heineman, the tycoon who runs the vast Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, has issued a statement challenging our report that he depleted the railway's assets to start a conglomerate and that, in the process, allowed the railway to deteriorate.

We pointed out that Heineman used $34 million of the railway's funds in 1965 to start a diversification program that led to the creation of Northwest Industries, a holding company which now owns the railroad and a host of other companies.

Meanwhile, the railroad's accident rate had doubled since 1964. Its rate of derailments caused by bad track has also doubled and the amount of freight damage has shot up sharply. Heineman is now trying to sell the troubled line to its employees.

In response to these facts, Heineman said this: "Contrary to Anderson's contention, Northwest Industries has actually sustained the railroad and kept it afloat. It is not the other way around. Not one cent of assets has been diverted from the railroad to its parent company."

What Heineman says is correct; indeed it is the point of our story. We reported not that the holding company was living off the railroad, but that the diversification program was begun with railroad money badly needed to upgrade service.

Heineman's statement that the parent company is "keeping the railroad afloat" confirms our report that the Chicago & Northwestern is in bad shape.

But the real issue, which his statement avoided, is whether he should have pumped the $34 million back into the railroad in 1965 instead of using it to go shopping for two chemical companies.

In view of what happened to the Penn Central under similar circumstances, this issue is of major concern. Railroads, after all, are public utilities, and their officers have an obligation to assure that their management serves the public interest.

We think the record is clear that Heineman has failed the public badly. And we think this is borne out by the fact that he is now trying to sell the railroad while keeping the chemical companies which the railroad's money bought five years ago.

Footnote: This column has sought repeatedly to reach Heineman for comment on his management of the railroad. He has refused to return our calls.

There's No Rush in U.S. Withdrawals From Vietnam

By BRUCE BISSAT

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

The widely held impression is that if President Nixon keeps his promised withdrawal schedule and gets U.S. force levels in Vietnam down to 284,000 by next May, nearly all ground combat units will be gone. The impression is wrong.

In his various pronouncements on withdrawals, the President has emphasized the removal of combat units. He and other top officials in his administration also have indicated that the "remainder forces" would be mostly logistical and support troops, plus sea and air units.

The fact is that withdrawals up to this time, which have reduced our total armed strength in Vietnam to just a bit more than 400,000 men, have included sizeable numbers of support troops.

The more important thing to know is that a considerable number of ground combat elements will be among the 284,000 expected to remain on the Vietnam scene after May 1, 1971.

But the expressed hope is that by mid-1971 most of such units would no longer be engaged in dangerous, offensive patrol duty but would be assigned mostly to defend our logistical forces. The presumption is that in this defensive role they would be far less likely to suffer substantial casualties.

It is clear from this privately given indication that, whatever the President or others say publicly about the improvement of the South Vietnamese army as a fighting force, we do not yet have complete confidence in it. Otherwise, we could rely upon it to protect our remaining support forces.

To get our combat men into defensive posture, we need to train at a fairly rapid pace South Vietnamese helicopter units. It is not widely appreciated, but a high proportion of our present battlefield losses is from downed helicopters searching out and gunning down roving Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers. A few downed helicopters a week are almost enough to account for present U.S. casualty figures. The rest are landmine and booby-trap victims, or men under siege at advance fire bases. No main force engagements with the enemy have occurred since last August.

On the assumption we have disrupted Hanoi's "southern strategy" rooted in an offensive build-up in the original Cambodian Sanctuaries, U.S. officials think the Reds' most severe problems now will be in the north from Hue to Da Nang.

The argument is, of course, that they must maintain their fighting credibility, and that they can support northern assaults more easily because of shorter supply lines down the Laotian part of the Ho Chi Minh trail and into South Vietnam via the tested A Shau valley route.

The larger question is what all this means for the 284,000 U.S. men who will still be left in Vietnam late next spring. At this writing, the President is understood to have no specific plan at all for further pullouts after the May 1 deadline is reached.

The only thing which could break the matter wide open and get all our forces out fairly quickly would be successful negotiations with Hanoi at Paris. But despite the naming of David Bruce to head our delegation there, that prospect has not brightened.

In the absence of such a development, we seem committed to keep a large force in South Vietnam, with ground, sea and air "strike capability," until we are satisfied that Saigon's forces truly can take care of themselves and have a fair chance from the independence of Hanoi's dominance which is their professed goal.

It is an interesting circumstance that training of South Vietnamese sea and air units is the slowest part of "Vietnamization," and that this fact gives us the excuse to keep on the scene air and naval forces which can be used offensively for a long time to come, whenever South Vietnamese ground units falter in defending their soil. Clearly, President Nixon has not yielded on the idea of salvaging some kind of victory for the South Vietnamese—with perhaps long-continuing help from us.

U.S. Growth Spurs Careers in Forestry

By ERNIE HOOD

With the need for preservation of our natural resources gaining increasing recognition, work in forestry is taking on new importance.

Foresters manage, develop and protect the wooded areas that cover more than a third of the nation's land and provide timber, water, and recreation areas.

Logging activities, use of forest products, reforestation, forest fire prevention and protecting forests from insects and diseases all are the forester's responsibilities.

There are more than 25,000 foresters in the United States—a third of them in the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture, about as many in other federal agencies and the remainder in private industry—mainly pulp and paper, lumber, logging and milling companies.

A bachelor's degree with a major in forestry is the minimum educational requirement for those seeking a career in forestry. Courses are offered by 48 or more colleges and universities.

Employment opportunities for forestry graduates are expected to be favorable all through the 1970s as the country's growing population and raising living standards increase demand for forest products and use of forests for recreation areas.

Private owners of timberland are expected to employ increasing numbers of foresters to take advantage of improved forestry and logging practices.

The federal government also is likely to offer increasing employment opportunities for foresters, mainly in the Forest Service. State government agencies may do the same.

In the federal government, beginning foresters with a bachelor's degree can expect to start at salaries ranging from $5,732 to $6,981 a year, depending on their academic record. Foresters in top level positions earn considerably more.

Entrance salaries in state jobs and in private industry vary, but in private industry the levels appear comparable to those in federal service.

A booklet, "So You Want To Be A Forester," can be obtained from the American Forestry Association, 919 17th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20006. Information on forestry careers in the Forest Service is available from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, Washington D. C. 20250.

KINGSTON They say good things come to those who wait. Well, the Kingston Braves almost waited too long last night before going to work on the pitching staff of the Poughkeepsie Lasers as they came up with nine runs in the bottom of the sixth stanza to defeat the visitors, 11-9. Pete Watzka slugged a grand slam homer in the inning.

The victory gave the Braves a one-game lead in the best two-out-of-three series between the first and second round winners for the Northern Division crown. Poughkeepsie, last year's defending champs, won the first round with a 9-2 record. Kingston took the second at 11-0. It was also the 14th straight win for Kingston since they were at 6-3 in the first round.

Mickey Savino started for Poughkeepsie and managed to keep the Braves befuddled for six innings as the visitors built up a 6-2 lead off ailing Charlie Moore. However, Savino faltered and gave way to Paul McPeck and John Kelly.

Jerry Hawkins started things off in the sixth with a single and Dave Horton walked. Joe Schabot belted a base hit scoring Hawkins. Tom Tegeler hit into a force play, but found himself on second as the result of a throwing error. Horton and Schabot scoring.

Paul McPeck replaced Savino and walked the next three batters forcing in a run. Manager Ed DiStefano again went to the mound for a pitching change, bringing John Kelly. Watzka greeted Kelly in anything but a hospitable manner as he belted his bases-full round-tripper.

Hawkins was again up and drew a walk. Horton doubled

The two teams go at it again on Friday night, 8 p.m. at River-view Field in Poughkeepsie. Buster Narum and Ron Thomas Indianapolis Clowns tonight, 8 o'clock, at Dietz Stadium. Kingston High stars George Geanuleas and Gallo will pitch.

Dolphins Cut Norton

By United Press International Add Rick Norton's name to the long lists of glamor college quarterbacks who never quite made it with the pros.

For every Joe Namath who lives up this college reputation, there are several QBs like Norton who fail to display the form in the pros that they had in college.

Norton, who gained over a thousand yards passing at Kentucky for three consecutive years while tossing for 24 TDs, threw just six TD passes in four years with the Miami Dolphins and was one of eight players placed on waivers Monday when the squad was reduced to 66 players.

Norton was a first round bonus pick of the Dolphins when the club was formed in 1966. He signed a four-year $300,000 contract and was the player the Dolphins were going to build the franchise around.

Norton got off to a bad start in his rookie year when he suffered a fractured jaw and missed the final half of the season. The next season the Dolphins drafted Bob Griese of Purdue and Griese quickly beat Norton out of a job.

Norton got a chance to start five games last season when Griese was injured but he completed only 44 per cent of his passes and threw only two TD passes. He played one quarter in the Dolphins' first exhibition game last Saturday and had two passes intercepted.

Coach Don Shula obviously felt there was no place for Norton in the Dolphins' future and cut him.

"I hope to stay in football," the 26-year-old Norton said after he received the news but he's probably going to have a difficult task finding a QB job.

Another high draft choice cut by the Dolphins was defensive tackle, Jim Urbanek, a third-round choice.

The pro teams, who have to get down to 60 players by Thursday, were busy cutting players now that the first exhibition games are over.

Another big college name who didn't make it is Scott Appleton, the former Texas star who was cut by the New Orleans Saints. The Saints are the third pro team to get rid of him.

No Managerial Ambitions for DiMaggio

By CHARLES J. TIANO
MORT LAFFIN

KINGSTON
"The day I finished playing as a Yankee, I said that I didn't want to manage. And my decision remains the same today."
Joe DiMaggio, the living legend of major league baseball, had said it before and he said it again to a bevy of sportswriters and sportscasters during his visit to Dietz Stadium for the Saturday baseball clinic.
This was the famed Yankee Clipper, who just a few hours before had been the recipient of a standing ovation from 50,000 fans that lasted nearly four minutes at the Yankee Stadium. Soon he was to face about 400 Little Leaguers and he made the transition in one easy, graceful stride.

The interview raised a sore point with Joe, one that has obviously nettled him down through the years.
How did you feel being a coach for the Oakland A's after being the legendary No. 5 for the Yankees and how come you never actually coached for the Yankees?, he was asked.
The tall clipper, lean and sparse as in his playing days, hesitated ever so fleetingly, then said it again.
"Well, the Yankees never offered me a job. Mr. Finley did. He made me a very fair offer and I accepted. He has a young ball club with some potentially good hitters like Reggie Jackson and Sal Bando and wanted me to help."
"I helped the Yankees in spring training as a favor to my good friend, Dan Topping. But they never offered me a job over that."

Assuming that Joe D was firm in his decision not to seek a managerial berth, how about the commissioner's office?
"Bowie Kuhn, Commissioner Kuhn, offered me a job last spring and I turned it down. The offer is still there."
How about the post of commissioner?
"That's another story. If the right offer was made, I might consider it. Right now, I don't think so, but the possibility is there."
Next came the question and answer to something that many area fans find hard to believe—the incredible friendship between DiMaggio and Fred Davi, the Braves promoter.

What made you come to Kingston for this affair, especially after the Old Timers game?
"Well, Fred Davi is a good friend of mine and I am doing him a favor. I like talking to and helping kids. They are the future of America and the future of major league baseball. I have always liked this area of the country, especially Kingston, and the people that reside here."
"Towns like Kingston and people like Fred Davi are keeping minor league and semi-pro baseball alive. The future of baseball is the athletes that take part in this area of competition."
What pitch did you hit for a double in the Old Timers game?
"I hit a changeup pitch off Ralph Branca. Ralph had tried to fire two fast balls by me, but they missed the strike zone.

He then came in with the changeup and, while it had me out in front a little bit, I managed to stay with the pitch."
Joe D was a little miffed about the manner in which Whitey Ford treated the Old Timers and made no effort to hide it.
"Ford (Whitey Ford) started throwing drops, sinkers and curve balls as hard as he could. Here is a man who only has been out of baseball a couple of years and he's really moving them around against fellows who haven't played in 10 or 15 years, maybe longer."
"Vic Rashchi came out and lobbed it in there and there were some hits. Ford shouldn't have done what he did. After all, the people came to see action from us not a pitcher's battle. Branca came out and tried to get back at us for what Ford had done. He was humiliated but he couldn't get the last one over."

Did Joe think the welcome mat might be wearing thin after repeated appearances in the Old Timers affairs in New York? Here again there was evident just a slight residue of his resentment against the Yankee brass.
"I play for the New York fans, not the ball clubs," he said quickly. "I expect I'll be coming back for the Yanks and Mets Old Timers days but for how much longer I'm not sure."
Joe DiMaggio is not cast in the Frankie Frisch mould. Being quasi-modern, he doesn't put down present day ball players.
"There are plenty of good ball players in the majors today," he said. "Some great one like Hank Aaron. (Obviously, he has already consigned Willie Mays to Cooperstown.)

Joe D, who once batted .382 and had a career mark of .325, was sympathetic with low batting averages of the day.
"The batters have some things going against them—lower mounds and fresh arms," he said, the latter statement referring to the use of multiple relief pitchers—short man, long man and the mop-up guy.
DiMag stayed longer than he had planned, meeting and greeting a host of personalities—local officials, politicians, Little Leaguers, plain fans and members of the press. He never lost his cool. He was a class guy for five solid hours in Kingston. But that's not surprising. He has been a class guy all his life.

Seaver Puts Brakes on Pirates

By United Press International

Just like last year, Tom Seaver thinks pitching will make the difference in the National League stretch run. But this year, he says it will be the Pittsburgh Pirates' pitching, not his New York Mets, that decides the Eastern Division pennant.
"I think their pitching is going to hurt them going down the stretch," Seaver said after pitching the Mets to a 10-2 victory over the Pirates Monday night for a split of their four-game series.

Although the split left the Mets exactly where they started the weekend—2 1/2 games behind the Pirates—Seaver was satisfied. The Pirates, not surprisingly, were satisfied too.
"As long as we stay this way, I think in the last month, the pitching will make the difference," Seaver said. "We haven't lost anything. I figured before the weekend that if we got a split here, we'd be in good shape."

The Pirates, happy not to lose ground to their closest pursuer, figure time is on their side.
"We didn't lose anything," said shortstop Fred Patek of Pittsburgh. "We're still 2 1/2 ahead now. We've got to keep winning and they've got to keep winning. The thing is, they've got to catch us." Seaver survived a rocky three-inning one-double first inning and then blanked the Pirates on five singles the rest of the way to notch his 17th victory and tie Minnesota's Jim Perry for the major league leadership. The Mets-Pirates game was the only game in the National League Monday night.

In the only American League games Monday, Rick Monday hit a homer, two doubles and a single to lead a 19-hit attack as the Oakland Athletics beat Minnesota 7-3 and Boston halted a seven-run Detroit rally in the ninth to beat the Tigers 11-10 as brothers Billy and Tony Conigliaro drove in seven runs between them.

He referred to the injured Bob Moose, who last week won his first game in more than a month and to Steve Blass, who will come off the disabled list later this week.
"The way things transpired out there, I'd say we were lucky to win two games," Murtaugh said. "I'd say performance-wise, that they (the Mets) should have won three games."

Three Days Rest
Seaver, who pitched with just three days rest for only the fourth time this year, winning for the third time under those conditions, struck out only three batters—his lowest total this year as a starter. He said he could pitch every other start down the stretch on three days rest if the Mets needed him. It was his 17th complete game.

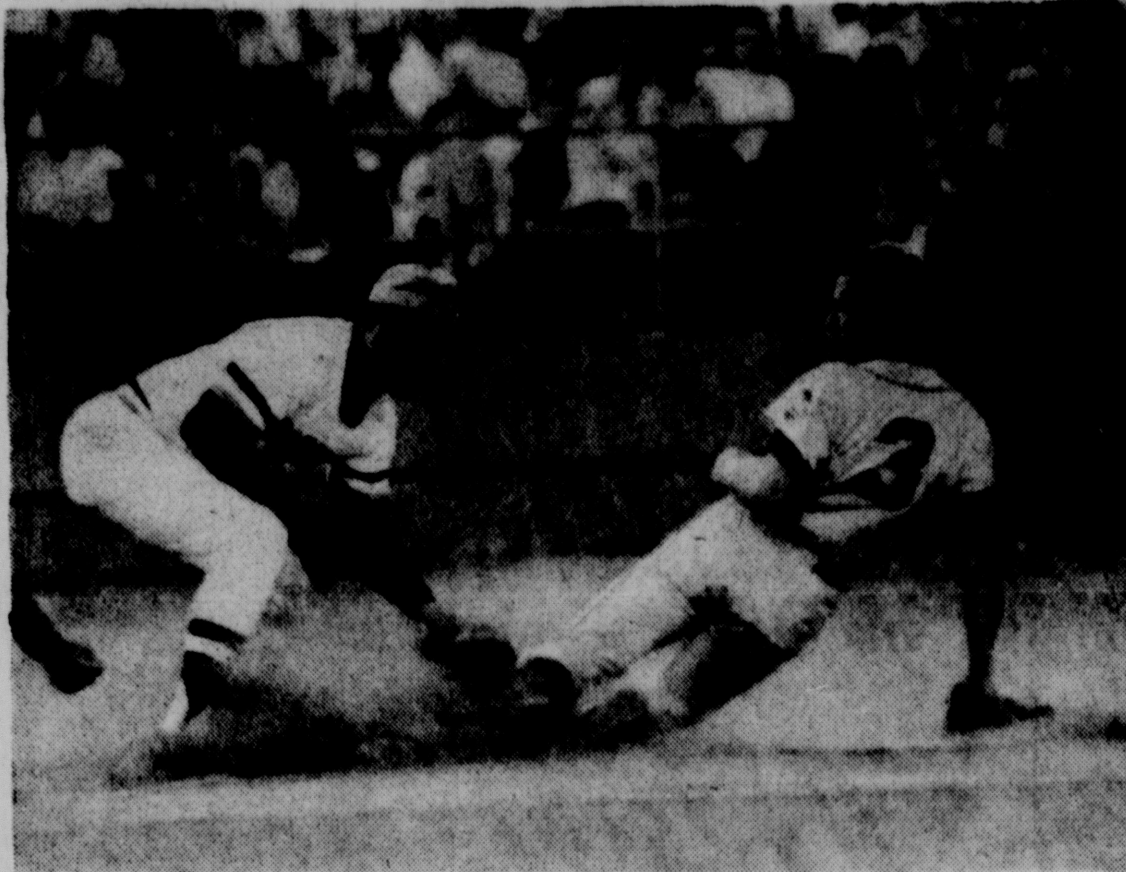

Tommie Agee drove in three runs and Donn Clendenon had three hits, including his 16th homer, to pace an 11-hit Mets attack.
New York scored all the runs it needed, five, in the second inning after Pirate first baseman Al Oliver threw an apparent inning-ending double play ball into left field. Two runs scored on the error and then Agee singled for a third run. Bud Harrelson singled. Ken Boswell walked to force in a run and Clendenon scored Agee with a sacrifice fly.

In the first five innings, three Pirate pitchers walked 11 batters—including four in a row at one stretch—to help the Mets put the game away. The Mets scored their first nine runs on just six hits.
"We have played a month without two of our star pitchers, so under those conditions I'd say our pitchers have done very well," said Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh.

Clemente Relates Abduction Story

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Robert Clemente, the Pittsburgh Pirates' superstar, had a narrow brush with death when he was abducted last year in San Diego, but now he says he never feared for his life during the ordeal.
"I knew nothing was going to happen to me," Clemente said today. "I knew for sure. I don't know why, I can't explain it. I just knew."
Clemente said four armed men forced him into a car near the Pirates' hotel in San Diego in May 1969 but he never reported the incident to police and it did not become known until Monday.
"Why should I report it?" he said. "I am alive, no?"
"I got everything back that they took, all my money, my all-star ring, everything. I forgot about the whole thing until somebody brought it up. Then I figure I better tell the story so it be printed right."
The abduction took place, Clemente said, less than 400 feet from the hotel, at night, on a well-lighted street, as he returned from a restaurant carrying a bag of take-out chicken.
He said one of the four men produced a gun, they forced him into the car, drove him to an isolated mountain area, ordered him to strip to his undershorts and took his wallet, all-star game ring and about $250 cash he had in his pocket.

"I didn't have time to do anything," he said. "These people were all over me. I take everything I have. I felt someone on my knee and I think they going to break it."
At this point, Clemente figured it was time to say something, even to lie.
"I didn't say much to them. I just said that I was playing for San Diego," he said. "I didn't tell them my name. I point to my all-star ring."
"In the confusion, they were saying that wasn't my ring. They take my ring off my finger and they say it isn't my ring. They try the ring back on my finger and now it doesn't fit, so they say it isn't my ring." Two of the abductors were Spanish-speaking. Clemente, a Puerto Rican, finally talked to one of the Spanish-speaking kidnappers and they returned his possessions, allowed him to dress again, and drove him back within a couple blocks of the hotel.
"I started walking, and then I heard their car returning," Clemente said. "I started looking around for a rock, but I couldn't find one."

The car got close, and this time the four men were only returning Clemente's chicken. He didn't eat it.
Until this week, Clemente had told only teammates Jose Pagan and Matty Alou, Coach Bill Virdon and General Manager Joe L. Brown of the ordeal.
"I figure this way they didn't hurt me, and nobody knew about it. I think they learned a lesson."
"I forget. I don't hold anything against anybody. I had a complete feeling that nothing would happen to me. My mother always says to me never hurt anybody and nothing will happen to you," Clemente said.

Dismay, Shock Over Deaths of Dutchess Students

DAVID L. BLACKMAR

By MATT SPIRENG

PINE PLAINS

Residents of the small northern Dutchess community of Pine Plains were shocked and dismayed Monday morning when they awoke to discover that two of their finest young people were among those killed in a Peruvian plane crash on Sunday.

Pamela Seitz, 16, the daughter of Mrs. Florence Seitz, of Pine Street, and David L. Blackmar, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan F. Blackmar, of East Church Street, were two of 49 teen-aged students traveling under the auspices of the International Fellowship Inc., a privately operated students exchange service, who died along with 52 others in the crash near Cuzco, Peru.

"I guess that's how fate works: they were inseparable in life and inseparable in death," sobbed Pamela's older sister, Mrs. William Conover, who went on to explain that the two had been the closest of friends for many years.

Both David and Pamela were to enter the senior class at Pine Plains High School in the fall. "They were both outstanding kids," said Director of Guidance, Elliot Golden, who will become principal of the high school in September.

"I didn't believe it when I first heard it," Golden continued sadly. "They were both wonderful, very popular, always had a smile; they will be highly missed by the school community."

"You always hear these generalities, but they're true in the case of these kids. They were friendly, outgoing, warm, and very well liked," Golden continued.

"They were both so full of life," said Pamela's sister, Mrs. Conover. "bouncy, and happy and full of life."

Mrs. Conover went on to explain that she had been to Peru under the same program five years earlier, and, in fact, had been in the same airport near which Pamela died on Sunday. When she died, Pamela was on the way to Lima, Peru, where she was to stay at the home of Rosie Zomoeta, a girl who had been an exchange student at the Seitz home five years earlier.

What made Pamela's death even harder to take for the Seitz family was the fact that her father had died only as recently as April of this year.

Both Pamela and David were very active in school affairs according to relatives. Pamela was president of the Ski Club and a member of the Traffic Club, among others. David was a member of Ski Club and took part in many class activities.

According to Golden, both students were planning on attending college when they graduated from Pine Plains High School.

The two had left from Kennedy International Airport on June 19 to spend the summer in Peru, learning and living with the people of that nation. They were scheduled to return to the United States sometime in September.

At the time of the crash the students were returning from a week-long tour of the Inca ruins, some 360 miles southeast of the Peruvian capital of Lima.

In addition to his parents, David is survived by a younger sister, Susan, at home, and an older brother, Airman First Class Kenneth Blackmar who is stationed at Luke Air Force Base, Glendale, Ariz.

Pamela is survived by her mother and her older sister.

According to Mrs. Conover, funeral arrangements can not be worked out until arrangements are made through the State Department.

Red Hook School Board Invitation...

By TIM SCHUSTER

RED HOOK

The Red Hook Board of Education resolved Monday night to invite County Representatives Madison Sipperley Jr., Kenneth Stewart, and Town Supervisor Warren Simmons to the next regular school board meeting in an attempt to settle several road problems.

One problem, which has been thoroughly discussed at both village and town board meetings, is concerned with a hazardous traffic situation on Linden Avenue.

Trustee Robert Bowman

suggested inviting the officials to expedite action in rectifying two bad curves, no sidewalk and a narrow bridge on Linden Avenue.

He pointed out that with the building and expansion of Mill Road School, the completion of Recreation Park of Red Hook, and the extensive housing developments of Linden Acres and College Park that the road is dangerous and inadequate.

In the school transportation scheme, 26 buses in a row must traverse the road several times a day with students.

Board President Francis

Rabbett said that there had been some talk of redirecting an entire segment of the road so it would eliminate the bridge and one curve by cutting behind Rec Park.

Another road problem exists where Rockefeller Lane meets Route 9, according to District Principal Russell J. Keefe. He said that the board had been trying to get a new entrance to Route 9 approved and completed for two years through the Town Board.

A letter from Supervisor Warren Simmons said that a new land owner was disinclined to part with the necessary land to rectify the dangerous entrance.

The situation is such that poor visibility precludes the possibility of school buses using the road safely. Simmons suggested that the town might have to take sterner methods, which Keefe interpreted to mean legal recourse, to complete the project satisfactorily.

Even if nothing comes of a meeting with the elected officials, school board members felt that they should be made aware of the existent problems.

In other business, bids were awarded for most of the furnishings of the Mill Road School addition, as well as bids for many school supplies.

Keefe announced that the complete staff for the coming school year is complete with the addition of four teachers approved Monday. They are: Joyce Van Horn, business department; Jane Sawyer, grade three; Joan Morrison, junior high librarian; and Jeanette Sargent, high school Spanish and French.

Trustee Dr. George Michael asked that the board consider the naming of a department chairman to the rapidly expanding business department, which currently has no such position.

The board also resolved to change pay periods from twice a month to every other Friday afternoon, increasing the number of periods by two.

It was resolved that the board contribution for eligible employees in the health insurance program will be 85 per cent for individual coverage and 50 per cent for dependents, effective July 1, 1970. This includes both teaching and other employees.

A letter was received by the board from an attorney representing a Hudson newspaper which is considering lawsuit against the district for failure to supply administrative salaries prior to the recent budget vote and schoolboard elections.

...Concern in Rhinebeck District

RHINEBECK Rhinebeck School Board President Hans Boehm expressed concern with the "limits of academic freedom" at the board meeting Monday evening after expounding on a proposal by the American Federation of Teachers.

He spoke in reference to a proposed kindergarten through high school "curriculum" being distributed by the AFT to a reported 200,000 teachers. The suggested "curriculum" would provide instruction on bargaining tactics, walkouts, picket lines, and debates on rights and duties of public employees.

Boehm asked that William Fisher, an elementary school principal, investigate the program. The board president also said that he was personally unaware of the limits of teachers' discussion in the classroom, but was "concerned."

On another matter, Boehm said of the district's school lunch program that the funds "have reached the bottom of the barrel." He said that three alternatives presented themselves: raising the prices, serving less food, or raising the subsidies. District manager Walter Snyder will research the problem.

A request by district resident Woody Klose to alter the boundary line between the Rhinebeck and Red Hook School Districts was not approved by the board.

Klose wanted the line moved so that his child could attend Red Hook instead of Rhinebeck schools, but District Superintendent Roscoe Williams suggested that the reasons given by Klose were not sufficient to warrant the lengthy legal process.

The Rhinebeck board agreed, and added that the district did not want to lose any of its tax base.

Two school librarians tendered their resignations, and both were accepted by the board.

High school librarian Joan Morrison resigned to take a job in the same capacity at Red Hook junior high, and Chancellor Livingston and Bulkeley Schools librarian Madeline Burek will take a similar job with the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York. Both resignations are effective this summer.

A common problem with school districts this year cropped up when bids for fuel oil were opened. The bids were up an estimated 60 per cent, according to Boehm, from last year.

Business manager Snyder suggested re-bidding. "With these figures, we would be over our budget," he warned. While noting that several other districts have experienced difficulty along the same line, Boehm and the board decided to postpone a decision until next month's meeting.

Dairy products bid was awarded to Dairylea, and ice cream products to Bordens. An old, damaged piano was sold to the only bidder for $25.

An old Dodge pickup truck, for sale by the district, was awarded to one of the two bidders by the flip of a coin. Both bidders offered $76.

A committee of two, principal William Fisher and board member James Kelly, was appointed by Boehm to draft a district code of ethics, required by new state law.

District Principal Ralph C. Steeves will return home from a lengthy stay in the hospital this week, according to Boehm.

The Kennedy Women — Part VIII

Robert Kennedy's Wife, Ethel

(Eighth in a series of 12 articles excerpted from the new book, "The Kennedy Women", in which America's First Lady of Literature focuses her talents on the distaff side of an American dynasty.)

By PEARL S. BUCK

What sort of woman did Robert Kennedy marry?

Ethel Skakel Kennedy lives at Hickory Hill in McLean, Virginia, not far from Washington, in a big comfortable family home with a bright red, welcoming front door. It is the home she shared with her husband.

I know that Robert Kennedy loved his wife deeply and completely. He loved her for to him she was wholly lovable. And she is woman enough to have put him first, above all, above house and friends and even above children. She understood him. She knew that he needed stability, he needed to know where she was, and so she stayed at home where he wanted her to be.

She once said, "I don't think a politician's wife should get involved in politics. I think she should work at making her home a nice place for her husband to come home to, a place for him to forget politics."

She believes children should be given as happy a childhood as parents can possibly give them. "When they grow up," she says, "life is difficult enough. Our children, thank God, had so many extra advantages. We tried to instill in them the realization that when they grow up, they will have to contribute to society. They learn how to do it by looking out for each other, by helping each other."

She knew that her husband had many interests, although his political life and ambitions were foremost. She did not resent his love of sports and shared it when she could. She accepted the fact that men needed the company of other men and she was not jealous of his men friends or of other women. She knew she was essential to him and that sufficed her.

She never played the martyr. When he came home, it was not to be met by her with a list of her troubles and complaints. She solved her own problems and shared with him only those she could not solve alone. She had no need for the love and approval of others; she wanted only his.

When he was abroad, he sent her a love message every day in the language of each country in which he visited. She treasured, as any woman would, such spontaneous evidences of his devotion, but if he had not sent them she would not have been troubled. They were a truly married man and woman and they enjoyed having children, many children. She liked being pregnant by him. She welcomed having a child by him. She was proud of it.

Of course she knew the danger in which he lived. She knew that if he went on to the presidency he would probably be killed. She lived in terror, but she would not let any of us see it. She had already learned to cope with tragedy: Both parents and her favorite brother, George, Jr., had been killed in freak plane accidents, and eight months later, his wife, Joan Patricia, choked to death at dinner. Ethel, indeed, knew tragedy.

She went about her own busy life in the big houseful of children, happy, occupied, cheerful, always approving of him, always encouraging him to do what he wished, as he wished to do it.

But secretly she prepared herself for whatever might happen. She knew, and she planned how she would take it and what she would do. She would continue their family life exactly as it was at Hickory Hill, only he, of course, would not be there. The children must not forget him. His pictures, his things, must not be put away. They must be left as they were, as though he were still there.

She had begun to think of it in the days after the President had been killed. She saw her husband's spirit weaken. He seemed physically to droop and fade. He grew thin, his clothes hung on him. He went for long lonely walks, accompanied only by his big dog, Brumus.

He never really talked much, but now he was exceptionally silent. He devoted himself almost fanatically to Jack's widow and children. He displayed an open prejudice against his brother's successor, Lyndon Johnson. But she understood and loved him more than ever, if that was possible, because she knew. When he decided to run for the presidency, she was certain.

"... Your Eminences, Your Excellencies, Mr. President. In behalf of Mrs. Kennedy, her children, the parents and sisters of Robert Kennedy, I want to express what we feel to those who mourn with us today in this cathedral and around the world..."

The date was June 8, 1968. The place was New York's St. Patrick's Cathedral. The voice of Edward Moore Kennedy.

Ethel Kennedy, dressed in mourning, a black veil over her face, listened, her children with her. She had thought herself prepared. She had known death before, sudden death. But nothing had really prepared her—nothing.

Now that he is gone, she carries on for him in her own way. She speaks out more frankly than ever for the things her husband fought for. Though she is only forty-one years old, she is still married to Robert Kennedy. She is a loyal Kennedy. But she is resolutely herself, too. Her life is planned. She is not introspective, she will not allow herself sadness, nor accept it from others. Her occupation is her children.

She is accustomed to a large family, for she was next to the youngest in a family of seven. Her Dutch father was a self-made man who began as a railway clerk and never forgot the fact. Her mother was a busy, cheerful Irishwoman. Perhaps it was from these sources that Ethel Kennedy inherited and learned her firm, practical, friendly ways.

In spite of the big house, in spite of the acres of landscape surrounding it, in spite of her many children, her life is relatively simple. She breakfasts early, at seven, with her children. She drives some of them to school, she bathes and feeds the baby, Rory. She lunches with some of her children, she reads to them.

She has many friends. Hordes of celebrities used to come to Hickory Hill when Bobby lived. Some still do. Ethel calls these show business stars "sparklies." She now makes it an unbreakable rule not to visit the Kennedy graves with any celebrity. She visits her dead only privately.

She is deeply religious, as Rose Kennedy is, and she reads the Bible to her children. In fact, there are similarities between the two women, a quality which expresses itself in fortitude. Its source, I think, religion. "I don't know about religion as a national or political issue," Rose Kennedy once said, "but I think religion is wonderful for children. Most children seek this stability and purpose."

Again it may be that both women be nature have these qualities of stability and purpose, and simply express them through the religious atmosphere in which they have been reared. Whatever the source, the fact remains that both women profess the Roman Catholic faith, both practice it earnestly in their daily lives, both teach it to their children. And their faith gives them courage to accept life as it comes to them without despair.

Tomorrow: Patricia and Jean Kennedy

Pat O'Brien Takes Lead in Hyde Park Production

Everybody loves Pat O'Brien for himself. He's also the reason a first nighter audience stayed for the last curtain of Charles Horine's light comedy ME AND THEE which opened last night at Hyde Park Playhouse.

O'Brien, who appears with his wife and daughter in this week's offering in Hyde Park, visited with the audience at the conclusion of the show and it was the highlight of the evening. Here was this big beloved Irishman, the "good guy" of Hollywood films, charming everybody with his down to earth personality and snappy Gaelic jokes. He is a completely endearing man — a legend along with such names as the late Spencer Tracy and Humphrey Bogart. ME AND THEE is one of those very light family situation type comedies that can entertain but it simply doesn't match O'Brien's talents. The play has some amusing dialogue but it is a disappointment to see O'Brien in something so whimsical.

ME AND THEE concerns itself with a past-middle age couple, their groovy son, a psychiatrist friend and a hippie-type girl. It's the "squares" opposite the "in" crowd with the "squares" going groovy while the "in" kids go square.

Pat O'Brien is the father in ME AND THEE while his real life wife Eloise O'Brien appears in the role of the wife, Alice Carter. On stage with them is their daughter Brigid O'Brien as Lela; Matt Conley as Dr. Grant Reeves, a family friend; George Shannon as Roger Carter, the son; and Elsa Raven as a metermaid.

All gave commendable performances but the vehicle they have to sell to the audience is weak.

Pat O'Brien, deserves a better showcase. As a top star, he's one of the reasons Hollywood flourished when they were producing such films as THE STORY OF KNUTE ROCKNE, THE FIGHTING 69TH, FIGHTING FATHER DUNNE, THE IRON MAJOR and others.

O'Brien is the only actor in the profession to have portrayed five great Americans in motion pictures. He is still in great demand as a guest star on favorite TV shows and his motion pictures are being continually revived on TV.

Theatre Review

By DOROTHY A. NAREL

Pat O'Brien was still a struggling young actor when, reporting for rehearsal with the Chicago company of the play BROADWAY, he met Eloise Taylor. The great Irish actor told his audience last night, "I'm in show business 50 years and married 40 years."

The O'Briens have four children and six grandchildren. In 1960, with their family grown, Pat convinced Eloise to return to the stage and together they scored a trail of hits from coast to coast in FATHER OF THE BRIDE, OUR TOWN, NEVER TOO LATE, DEAR RUTH, TIME OUT FOR GINGER, ABSENCE OF A CELLO and LOVE AND KISSES.

Pat O'Brien has added writing to his long list of achievements. His best-selling autobiography is THE WIND AT MY BACK, words taken from an old Gaelic prayer. Born William Joseph Patrick O'Brien in Milwaukee, Wisc., where he attended Marquette Academy and later Marquette University as a law major, O'Brien made a name for himself scholastically and on the football field. During World War I, he and his boyhood friend, Spencer Tracy, enlisted in the U.S.

Navy and trained at Great Lakes Naval Training Station. After the Armistice, Pat enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York. After graduation, he started his career in stock companies and road shows.

The veteran actor has starred in 110 motion pictures, in more than a dozen hit stage plays, on countless TV dramatic shows, on radio, in his own nightclub song and dance act, as a vocal recording artist, as star of his own television series HARRIGAN AND SON.

Next week, Hyde Park Playhouse will present Dennis Cole of BRACEN'S WORLD in a pre-Broadway tryout of ALL THE GIRLS CAME OUT TO PLAY.

PAT O'BRIEN, veteran film star, who appears in the Charles Horine comedy ME AND THEE at Hyde Park Playhouse. It opened Tuesday night and will be staged through August 15. Appearing with O'Brien are his wife and daughter. Also George Shannon, Matt Conley and Elsa Raven. The Eddie Bracken Ventures Production is directed by Ben Janney.

Doing The Right Thing

By ELIZABETH L. POST
(C) 1970, Newsday, Inc.

Dear Mrs. Post: My husband's business frequently requires that he go to meetings and conventions in various parts of the country. One other employee who must attend the same meetings is a woman—young and attractive. I have no worries about the situation, but some of my friends have made remarks. How should this be handled to avoid gossip or criticism?

Penny: Dear Penny: Your husband and his fellow-employee have no choice if their company requires them to attend the same meetings. Therefore, there should be no "remarks." If they behave in a respectable and dignified manner, and do not spend too much of their free time together, only the most suspicious minds could find cause for criticism.

If You Demand Respect, Do Something to Earn It

Dear Mrs. Post: One of your columns I saw recently just irked me. It refers to a patient in a doctor's office calling the receptionist by her first name. Etiquette is quite correct and I couldn't agree more that no one has the right to call you by your first name without express permission or invitation. HOWEVER, etiquette failed to point out that this "receptionist" (of the next generation) should have the knowledge and diplomacy, befitting her "profession," not to humiliate anyone publicly. My mother taught me, "If you demand respect, do something to earn it."—Anne

Dear Anne: You have a point, and your mother had a better one. The nurse in question would have shown better manners by telling the patient in private that she would prefer to be called "Mrs. Smith." What is your most puzzling etiquette problem? To the sender of the most interesting question that I receive each week, I will send a free copy of Emily Post's Etiquette. The question chosen, and its answers, will be published in this column every Friday. Send your question to Elizabeth L. Post, The Daily Freeman, and don't forget to include your name and address. © 1970 Emily Post Institute (Distributed by Newsday Special)

Also the Misses Minnie Tozzi, Patricia Litts, Susan Wilson, Megan Decker, Laurie Barringer, Mary Kate Barringer, Deborah Martinez and Sharon Connor.

Gifts were received also from relatives and friends unable to attend. Miss Barringer will become the bride of Louis Rizzotto, son of Mrs. Philomena Rizzotto of New Paltz, in the late summer.

WELCOME WAGON TEA — The annual get-acquainted tea sponsored by Welcome Wagon of Kingston took place Wednesday, Aug. 5 at the home of Mrs. Robert (Dorothy) Kurzawa, Maverick Road, Woodstock. Principals at the social included (L-R) Liz Grimaldi, president of Welcome Wagon of Kingston; Dorothy Kurzawa, hostess; Helene Schildhorn, publicity chairman; Erna Brock, second vice president. All new residents who had moved into this area during the summer as well as regular members of the Club were invited. (Freeman photo by Haines)

Kisses Not Up to Par

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I can't solve myself and I don't want to ask anyone else for fear of appearing foolish. I don't know how to kiss. I am a 28-year-old normal male. I'm fairly good looking, clean, have a good job, a late model car, sharp clothes, and I have no trouble getting dates. But when it comes to kissing, I must be doing something wrong because all I get is complaints. It's gotten to the point where I just skip the kissing and go on to the next step, but I find most girls don't like this.

Can you help me? They say, "practice makes perfect," but I don't get a chance to practice because after I kiss a girl once she doesn't want to kiss me again.

WANTS TO LEARN

DEAR WANTS: Most people learn how to kiss without lessons, but you may need a few. You can't learn to kiss alone—you'll need a girl, so find one you'd like to kiss, and kiss her at the appropriate time. If she complains, ask her what was wrong with the kiss. (There are a variety of "bum" kisses. Too "wet," too dry, too hard, not hard enough, too passionate, not passionate enough, too prolonged, too brief.) If the girl likes you, she won't mind giving you a few pointers to improve your technique. If she doesn't like you that much—find another girl.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is constantly asking someone he happens to be with to "lend" him a couple of dollars, or a "five." His excuse is that he has to cash a check, and he hasn't anything less than a twenty or a fifty on him. No one doubts him, either, as this man is very well-to-do. (He also never picks up a check when he is by far the one in the crowd who is best able to treat everybody, but that's another problem.)

Abby, this man never makes an effort to repay any of these "emergency" loans, and I for one am fed up with it. Now why would a man who is worth a fortune want to chisel in this manner? And if you can think of a good way to get my money back, I'd appreciate it.

DEAR FED: Don't look for any deep psychological reasons for your friend's behavior. He's just cheap. And the best way I know to get something out of him is to ask for it.

DEAR ABBY: When a girl asks a boy to a "girl-ask-boy" party, is the girl supposed to provide the transportation? We are not old enough to drive, and call for us. But whose parents?

UNDER AGE IN WATERLOO DEAR UNDER AGE: When a girl asks a boy to a party, she's asking him to "escort" her only. The "escort" should provide the transportation. If for some reason, he can't manage it, the girl's parents are next in line.

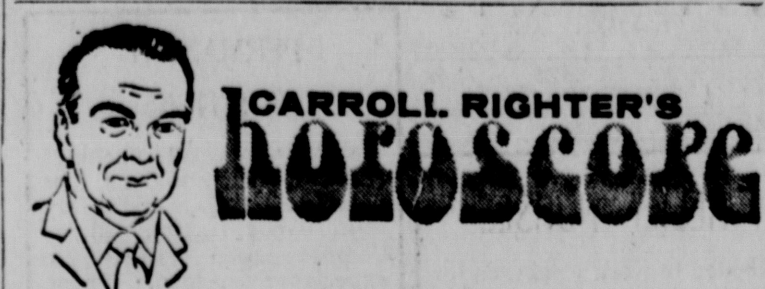

DEAR ABBY: May I air my gripe in your column? The offenders probably don't even know they are guilty, and it might wake them up.

Whenever I drop a note to someone, asking for a recipe, an address, or some other bit of information which I want, I always enclose a stamped, addressed envelope as a convenience to that person. Also, a check, and he hasn't anything less than a twenty or a fifty on him. No one doubts him, either, as this man is very well-commodate me and provide the stamp besides?

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

STRAPPER. (Q.) Kids write you about getting spankings from their parents. Mine have never spanked me, even though I have done many things to deserve punishment. Sometimes I take a strap and spank myself. I'm 13 and don't know why I do it. Do you?—Fuzzled.

(A.) Not precisely, because you do not go into enough detail. If this urge to take a strap to yourself continues, or gets worse, talk to your doctor about it. He perhaps can refer you to someone who can help you understand the urge and do something constructive about it.

TWO DRESSES. (Q.) I have only two good dresses. This embarrasses me because, between the things I've gone to and the ones I'm going to, it means wearing the same two dresses over and over.

All my friends have several dresses they can wear. It's not that my parents can't afford more clothes for me—it's just that my mom remembers how she was when she was 13, and says that two dresses are plenty for a 13-year-old girl.

My dad agrees. I've talked it over with them, and they say I have all the dresses I need. I'd be happy to settle for one more. What can I do?—Over and Over in Pennsylvania.

(A.) A repeat appearance is no cause for shame if the dress you have on is clean, neat, and flattering.

Keep your hair beautifully groomed, smile a lot, and the boys and girls at the parties you go to will notice you and not your dress.

ABC to Carry on the Cause

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Daniel Boone," who over the years appeared to have been primarily responsible for winning the American Revolution with a little help from his friends, has been retired by NBC. But his cause will be carried on next season by ABC's "Young Rebels."

The action series set in 1777 is hung on three young people who are supposed to be members of a secret American patriotic group called "The Yankee Doodle Society." Its television genealogy apparently includes Pennsylvania's Jeremy Larkin, who is believed to be a lazy, ne'er-do-well, but is really the leader of the underground patriots and, under a secret commission from General Lafayette himself, a captain in the Continental Army.

Since ABC has placed the series in an early Sunday evening time period, euphemistically referred to as a "family viewing hour" the series obviously is aimed at the under-18 audience. Certainly it is youth-oriented in cast and viewpoint.

Rick Ely, the youthful blond actor who is one of its three leads, explained that while

Egypt Balks on Exchange For the Four Israeli Pilots

By United Press International
The semi official Cairo newspaper Al Ahran said today Egypt will not repatriate the four Israeli Phantom jet pilots it has captured.
Israeli officials had expressed hope that U.N. peace envoy Gunnar V. Jarring would be able to convince Egypt to agree to a prisoner exchange, the newspaper said.
The newspaper, quoting a responsible source, said Cairo considered "The current situation is no more than a temporary cease-fire and the struggle with the enemy was still continuing."
As the 90-day cease-fire on the Suez Canal entered its fourth day, Israeli military records showed a steady decline in guerrilla attacks from Jordan, Lebanon and Syria.
There were a dozen guerrilla incidents Saturday in the first 24 hours of the cease-fire, but only seven Sunday and four Monday.

Military observers attributed the failure of the guerrillas to make good their threat of stepped-up attacks to two possible factors:
—Tension between the guerrillas and the Jordanian government which may have caused the guerrillas to pull forces away from the Israeli frontier to Amman for a possible confrontation.
—Reduced cooperation of the Jordanian and Lebanese armies with the guerrillas since Amman accepted the American peace initiative and Beirut applauded it.
Palestinian guerrillas in Amman said King Hussein of Jordan would soon attempt a showdown with the resistance movement, and warned their members to stand by their guns.

Two guerrilla groups that previously supported Egypt's acceptance of American peace proposals withdrew their support Monday night, but they said they still consider Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser "a national hero." The Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine and the Arab Palestine Organization had been the only ones to break Palestinian ranks.
Political sources in Jerusalem said Israel will stick to its interpretation of the U.S. Middle East peace initiative but will not make an issue of it at this point.
Controversy arose when U.N. Secretary General Thant told the Security Council that Israel had told Jarring it was ready to discuss "withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 conflict."

The Israeli sources said Prime Minister Golda Meir will send a letter to President Nixon in the next few days reaffirming that Israel had agreed only to talks aimed at "secure, recognized and agreed boundaries to be determined in a contractual peace agreement."

Nixon, Kosygin Likely To Attend U.N. Session

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — President Nixon and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin "very probably" will attend the U.N. General Assembly's 25th anniversary session this fall, an authoritative U.N. source said today.
The assembly will mark its first quarter century during the three-month annual session that starts Sept. 15. Heads of state and government of all 126 member countries have been invited to speak either during the general debate Sept. 17-Oct. 2 or at a special commemorative session to be held Oct. 19-24.
Oct. 24, 1945 is the date the U.N. charter took effect.
The U.S. delegation has reserved places on the speakers' lists for the first day of the general debate and for the last day of the commemorative session. There are indications that Nixon might prefer the earlier date.
The Soviet delegation has also reserved places on both lists. If Kosygin shows up, it probably will be for the commemorative session.
The fact that a country is on the speakers' list does not necessarily mean a top leader will attend. Among those who have announced or indicated that they will appear are the presidents of Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Tanzania, Upper Volta, Cyprus and Finland; the chancellor of Austria; and the prime ministers of Afghanistan, Austria, Britain, Japan, Jamaica, Lesotho, Malta, Mauritius and Senegal.

Meanwhile, prospects for East-West talks to reduce troops and arms in Europe remain remote despite the new Soviet-West German nonaggression treaty, diplomatic sources said today.
Informants said it would be at least four months before the North Atlantic Treaty Organization responds to the latest Soviet proposal for talks on mutual reduction of arms in Europe.
Although Bonn and Moscow are renouncing the use of force against each other and recognizing existing borders in Europe, troops and arms on both sides of the cold war frontiers are likely to remain at existing levels indefinitely.

Talks on mutual arms reductions are proposed for a European security conference, an idea long pushed by the Kremlin and the Soviet bloc.
The Warsaw Pact nations at a meeting in Budapest in June revised their proposed agenda for a European security conference and agreed for the first time to include talks on "the reduction of foreign armed forces on the territories of European states."

Sources here said the NATO allies would not respond before their foreign ministers meet in Brussels in December.
Two neutral European governments—Austria and Finland—also have been actively pressing for a European security conference. Both have offered their capital cities for preparatory talks. But the sources here said these proposals would also have to await the NATO meeting in December.
Some NATO nations, notably the United States, and Britain, have long been skeptical of the value of a European security conference without thorough preparation.
There is concern in some Western capitals that the Soviets could use the conference as a propaganda forum and as a confirmation of the formal international recognition of the Western nations are unwilling to concede to East Germany.

The Western and the Communist allies have agreed that both West Germany and East Germany would attend the conference even though the Western allies do not recognize the East German regime.
NATO is still working out its plans for cuts in manpower and firepower in phased combinations that could be discussed with the Communists. Meanwhile, several NATO members are looking for more evidence of Soviet intentions before warming to the idea of such a conference.
According to this line of thinking, the Soviet-West German nonaggression pact was one sign that the Soviets are sincerely interested in moving toward a detente in Europe. Another would be between the Soviet Union and the United States, or in the Big Four talks on West Berlin.

Showdown Vote for ABM Funds Is Scheduled for Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate critics of the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system attempted in their last full day of debate to dispel claims that expansion of the missile system is needed to spur the Soviet Union into an arms limitation agreement.
A showdown vote on funds for two more ABM sites is scheduled Wednesday, and it appeared that opponents may have picked up enough strength to reverse their one-vote setback of last year.
But Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania declared he will support Safeguard as a minimum response to a growing Soviet missile threat and as a bargaining chip at the strategic arms limitation (SALT) talks in Vienna.

Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., a leading opponent, acknowledged "the bargaining chip argument distracts us from the argument Safeguard simply will not work."
Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., chairman of the Republican Policy Conference, said Safeguard is essential to meaningful negotiations with the Soviets and defended its deployment as a "restrained response to grave threats."
Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., is co-author of an amendment to restrict Safeguard expansion to the two sites approved by one vote in last year's two-month debate. He contended in a speech prepared for Senate delivery that Safeguard is of little importance at the SALT talks when compared to the relative strategic positions of the two nations.

Allott, in a prepared speech, said the amendment sponsored by Cooper and Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., would virtually kill the entire Safeguard program, and that Safeguard is the least costly of the various possible responses to the Russian missile threat.
Other senators have claimed the ultimate cost of Safeguard will range from $4 billion to as much as $50 billion.
The Soviets, Allott asserted, are building such huge missiles as the SS9—comparable to nothing in the U.S. arsenal—which has the capacity of destroying U.S. missiles and makes sense only as the basis of a mighty first-strike capability.

Even if that is the case, Cooper replied, Safeguard is no answer.
"I consider that I would be derelict in my duty if I did not oppose further deployment of Safeguard and if I did not urge the greatest effort to be turned to the development of the advanced, dedicated 'hardsite' system for the security of our country in the event the SALT talks fail," Cooper said.

N. Y. Conference Set for Fall

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The State Environmental Conservation Department announced plans today for a conference this fall on the possibilities of turning thermal pollution into an industrial asset.
Gov. Rockefeller called the meeting the first of its kind in the nation.
Thermal pollution is generally regarded as the heat industrial plants throw off into lakes and streams when they use water to cool their machinery. It is becoming a major problem near industrial centers and nuclear power plants where generators and reactors work at extremely high temperatures.

Gov. Rockefeller called the meeting the first of its kind in the nation.
